Week in Review

This week was the last week of this course. I think I did well with this class. Call to Action assignment has been my favorite in this class. I read many motivational quotes about learning. I am not sure who shared the quote about how life is like a camera, capturing good times, learning from negative and taking another shot if things don't turn out great. I am glad Professor Robin shared this during the GoToTraing of this week since the quote was posted by another student from a different section.

Reflect and Connect:

This week I was more focused on Career Module since it was the last week. I never had thought about myself as a brand. Career Module gave me a great introduction to personal branding. For my development this week, I learned how to simply calculate time with rate using Excel. This was a simple math, but I pretty sure I will be using it in the future. From now on, I need to focus on branding myself better and I will do it by filtering out my social media accounts.
